Cautionary Statement Regarding Forward-Looking Statements

This communication contains “forward-looking statements” within the meaning of the safe harbor provisions of the Private Securities Litigation Reform Act of 1995 that are not limited to historical facts, but reflect Continental’s and UAL’s current beliefs, expectations or intentions regarding future events. Words such as “may,” “will,” “could,” “should,” “expect,” “plan,” “project,” “intend,” “anticipate,” “believe,” “estimate,” “predict,” “potential,” “pursue,” “target,” “continue,” and similar expressions are intended to identify such forward-looking statements. These forward-looking statements include, without limitation, Continental’s and UAL’s expectations with respect to the synergies, costs and other anticipated financial impacts of the proposed transaction; future financial and operating results of the combined company; the combined company’s plans, objectives, expectations and intentions with respect to future operations and services; approval of the proposed transaction by stockholders and by governmental regulatory authorities; the satisfaction of the closing conditions to the proposed transaction; and the timing of the completion of the proposed transaction.

All forward-looking statements involve significant risks and uncertainties that could cause actual results to differ materially from those in the forward-looking statements, many of which are generally outside the control of Continental and UAL and are difficult to predict. Examples of such risks and uncertainties include, but are not limited to, (1) the possibility that the proposed transaction is delayed or does not close, including due to the failure to receive required stockholder or regulatory approvals, the taking of governmental action (including the passage of legislation) to block the transaction, or the failure of other closing conditions, and (2) the possibility that the expected synergies will not be realized, or will not be realized within the expected time period, because of, among other things, significant volatility in the cost of aircraft fuel, the high leverage and other significant capital commitments of Continental and UAL, the ability to obtain financing and to refinance the combined company’s debt, the ability of Continental and UAL to maintain and utilize their respective net operating losses, the impact of labor relations, global economic conditions, fluctuations in exchange rates, competitive actions taken by other airlines, terrorist attacks, natural disasters, difficulties in integrating the two airlines, the willingness of customers to travel by air, actions taken or conditions imposed by the U.S. and foreign governments or other regulatory matters, excessive taxation, further industry consolidation and changes in airlines alliances, the availability and cost of insurance and public health threats.

UAL and Continental caution that the foregoing list of factors is not exclusive. Additional information concerning these and other risk factors is contained in Continental’s and UAL’s most recently filed Annual Reports on Form 10-K, subsequent Quarterly Reports on Form 10-Q, recent Current Reports on Form 8-K, and other SEC filings. All subsequent written and oral forward-looking statements concerning Continental, UAL, the proposed transaction or other matters and attributable to Continental or UAL or any person acting on their behalf are expressly qualified in their entirety by the cautionary statements above. Neither Continental nor UAL undertakes any obligation to publicly update any of these forward-looking statements to reflect events or circumstances that may arise after the date hereof.

Re: Talent Selection for Management and Clerical Co-workers

Yesterday in Houston, I spoke to CO's senior leadership about the process for organization design and talent selection of CO and UA management and clerical co-workers for the combined airline. I want to share with you the details that I gave them about that process.

As I've said before, I expect the impact of the merger on front-line employees to be minimal and that any effect on front-line co-workers should be minimized or eliminated through retirements, attrition and voluntary programs.

As I've also said, the merger will affect some management and clerical positions in Houston and Chicago. But I want you to understand that this is a long process and that no management and clerical positions, other than those for officers, will be eliminated as a result of the merger before March 31, 2011. The timing of job impacts following March 31, 2011 will depend on the integration plan for each business area, and those impacts will occur over the course of 2011 and into 2012.

Here's what will happen between now and then. I expect to soon name the senior officers who will report directly to me. After that, I'll work with those officers on the design for the new officer-level organization, and I will then name the rest of the officer group. Meanwhile, the functional integration teams are working on the organizational structure for the different departments, which will be finalized by the officers overseeing each area.

Our Talent, Organization and Culture team is currently working on a process for selecting other management and clerical co-workers for the new airline, and we'll announce more details about that process this fall.

For some groups, particularly those focused on the operation, the talent selection process is likely to extend into 2012, depending on when we expect to obtain a single operating certificate.

Decisions about people, organization and culture are among the most important decisions we will make during the merger integration process, and we're working hard to make the right decisions for the combined company. Because this transaction is a merger of equals, rather than an acquisition, there is much to consider and it takes time to make sure the decisions are the right ones, and that the decision making process itself treats people with dignity and respect. I know that you want more information, particularly about how the merger will affect you. As we have answers, we'll communicate with you directly, openly, and honestly, just like we always have and always will.
